

THE PATHWAY FROM EDUCATION TO VOCATION

Becoming a Difference Maker in POLITICAL SCIENCE

Why Study Political Science at Azusa Pacific University?

The Political Science major at Azusa Pacific University prepares students to become advocates for truth and justice in their nation and the world. Students gain the knowledge and skills they need to make and recognize good laws, distinguish justice from injustice, and understand the legitimate purposes and necessary limits of political power. The degree provides a solid foundation in American government, politics, history and classical political thought.

APU's Political Science major prepares students for careers in government, law, military, and law enforcement through rigorous training in classical and modern political thought, American politics, and international relations, and through interaction with Christian authors concerned with the relationship between politics and faith. Students majoring in Political Science at Azusa Pacific University can expect to work alongside faculty of faith who interact with local, state, and national political figures and national research and policy organizations. APU Political Science majors have opportunities to participate in internships in the nation's capital, as well as in military, government, and law enforcement agencies closer to home. Options for graduates include highly coveted internships with the California State Assembly and Senate. Department faculty place great emphasis on writing, and APU Political Science majors stand out for their strong professional writing skills. The Azusa Pacific campus is situated in the politically diverse and dynamic San Gabriel Valley, adjacent to urban Los Angeles. APU Political Science majors graduate with a clear sense of their region's role within the American political context.
