The Media Effect: How the News Influences Politics and Government
by Jim Willis, Ph.D.
How truthful is the news media’s version of reality? To what extent is government policy decided on the basis of this mediated reality and public reaction to it? Willis examines these questions as he explores the role of the traditional and nontraditional news media’s influence on decision-making at the highest levels of American government.

Monk Habits for Everyday People: Benedictine Spirituality for Protestants
by Dennis Okholm, Ph.D.
Based on his experiences with Benedictine monks, Okholm introduces the reader to the monks’ history, customs, and values, such as listening, humility, balance, obedience, hospitality, and stability. In a culture of Christian kitsch and consumer-oriented spirituality, Okholm brings some of the Benedictines’ concepts and practices to those who yearn for a deep and slowly nurtured spiritual life.

Reflections on Equity, Diversity, and Schooling
by Maria Pacino, Ed.D.
This blend of personal narrative and theoretical perspectives gives educators an intimate glimpse into diversity, equity, and social justice. Filled with engaging stories and practical applications, each chapter enlightens and inspires readers to act on issues of prejudice, racism, classism, sexism, and other social inequities in relationship to schools and schooling.

Three Strikes Laws
by Jennifer E. Walsh, Ph.D.
Walsh’s book provides a clear, comprehensive overview of the controversial Three Strikes law movement. Walsh analyzes the movement’s historical development, provides detail about various Three Strikes statutes adopted across the nation, and offers an in-depth examination of its rationale and consequences, helping readers understand one of the most controversial criminal justice developments of our time.
